

Join the Fight Against ALS: Together We Can Make A Difference

The Access for All in ALS Consortium is looking for participants for two important observational studies: Prevent ALS and Assess ALS. Funded by the National Institute of Health, these studies aim to better understand and treat ALS. Your participation can make a real difference in ALS research and help create a future without ALS.

Participation Requirements:

Participation will consist of in-person and/or remote visits where clinical data such as blood samples and cerebrospinal fluid (optional) will be collected. Participants will also complete speech tasks and questionnaires via our online portal.

Are you eligible?

We are seeking individuals living with ALS, their family members, caregivers, and anyone living without ALS who is interested in contributing to important ALS research and helping drive progress in finding better treatments. Remote participation is available for individuals living with ALS who are not located near a research site. Visit our website for a list of locations.
